RESEARCH INTERESTS

My research advances and applies psychometric methodology to solve critical measurement challenges in health research. I specialize in factor analysis with ordered categorical indicators, measurement invariance, and Monte Carlo simulation to evaluate factor enumeration and scoring approaches. A complementary mission develops computational psychometrics and physical-activity intervention models leveraging AI—including LLM-based persona generation—to improve measurement quality and enable scalable, personalized behavior change support.

Core areas: Psychometric Methodology · Physical Activity Interventions · Monte Carlo Simulation · Structural Equation Modeling · LLM-Based Computational Psychometrics · Population Health Analytics
